

DisneyParksDIY FROM THE DESK OF JOE COCONUT

October 2023 Issue No 6

Hey Now humans.

Well we have finally done it. The new website has been launched and we could not be happier. Introducing Royces.com. Your one stop shop for content updates, breaking coverage, and of course our own store. Excuse the pun but I'm going to go out on a limb and say that we may never see the linktree again. So buckle up and get ready for the next phase of all things Disney, Mickey, and of course the man with the backpack. Well done team, well done! -Joe

Where is Joe?

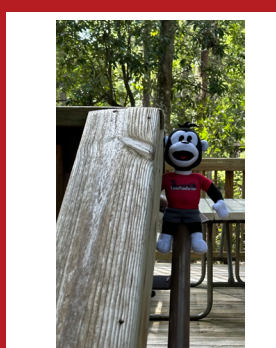

Obviously not in the backpack atm. Check back here each month to see what Joe is up to! Thank you to Preston for providing Joe's adventures for this month.

Remember to post your IG pics using #joecoconut and it might just show up in the next newsletter.

Joe: Hold your horses, my postcards, and my beanie. Let me tell you what. I'm going up.

Preston: OMG. I'm fixin' to be pitching a fit. Where the *&% is Joe?! I will tie a knot in his tail when I find him!

NOW where's Joe? He took some lessons from Mexico Donald on this trip with Preston! Geez. Preston may have shown him how to do this, but Donald may or may not have taught him how to sneak off and have a little extra fun without adult supervision.

Preston had this monkey jumpin' into bed before bedtime. Joe's step count was OVER THE TOP. So many adventures at Disney, such little legs.

Keena's Kerner

...that feeling you get when you are happily bouncing along at home like Tigger and your foot collides with that teenie plastic brick-of-a-demon that brings your kids (and some adults) such joy, and at that moment you writhe in pain like someone just drove a stake through the arch of your tender foot.....Why do we love these little passive-aggressive weapons? Why do they end up directly in the path of our innocent, unknowing feet??

It's a love/hate relationship and now Disney is involved. Does anyone know what the very first Disney Lego kit was? According to Lego's website, the first Disney Lego kit emerged in 1999 and was an 8-brick Winnie-the-Pooh's House Set which ignited the hook-up we all know and love, and the rest they say, is history. Two years later, Mickey and Minnie made their first appearance in a Lego set. Although Mickey may be the most popular Disney character, he wasn't the first. Oswald The Lucky Rabbit (one of Royce's favorites) holds that title and is now in his own Lego set commemorating the 100th anniversary of Disney animation.

Royce's TikTok live Lego build was a huge hit so we asked y'all to submit photos of your favorite Disney Lego sets. We had an overwhelming response! Here are are just a few.

Mimi's Magical Moments

Do you remember? Everything that happened in September? Ok, Ok...I am NOT Earth, Wind and Fire.

We shared some very different times together this month. Once you think you have seen it all, a new adventure comes along! Some live and some NSFS(not suitable for streaming) The hilarity and nonsense that goes on with this group is what gets me through the day. Enjoy just a few moments in time and a peek of Spooky Season!!

As always, many more full moments can be found on YouTube and TVRemix. Enjoy!

How to occupy your time on another rainy evening in Florida? Building LEGO sets and enjoying popcorn with an aggressive R2D2 Popcorn maker!!
